How is compound interest calculated?

We calculate compound interest each day by first multiplying the unpaid balance by the applicable interest rate and then dividing the result by 365 (or 366 in a leap year). We add this interest to the unpaid balance to get the unpaid balance for the following day. We calculate credit interest in the same way. Credit interest starts to add up on whichever of the following dates is farthest in the future:

- 30 days after the balance due date, if you filed on time;
- 30 days after the date you filed your return, if you filed it late; or
- the actual date you overpaid your taxes.

Interest rates can change every three months. If we charged or paid you interest, the current rates are noted on the Account summary page.
